Background

Hospice Nepal grew out of the vision of four friends in the year 1999. The friends hired four beds in a local hospital, and each sponsored and paid for a patient and the cost of their bed. Increasing demand over a relatively short period of time resulted in more beds being added. Eventually, the friends leased a small building to continue their work. Today, it is the leading hospice and palliative care centre in Nepal, which allows terminally ill patients to die painlessly and with dignity.

Hospice Nepal's goal is to provide patients at the end of their lives, their family members and other significant people with state-of-the-art palliative care and supportive services 24 hours a day, seven days a week, both at home and in a facility-based setting. A clinically directed interdisciplinary team consisting of patients, families, professionals and volunteers provide physical, social, spiritual and emotional care for the patients;

- Throughout the duration of the disease;
- Mainly in the last stages of an illness;
- During the dying process; and
- At the bereavement period.

Dealing with dying and death is hard on the hospice staff. Since opening their eight-bed facility in 2000, Hospice Nepal has seen roughly a hundred deaths a year. "It's difficult, no matter how hard we care, we can't save our patients. It's not like other medical fields, where you get to see them get better and leave," said Sanu Maiya Rana, the head nurse at Hospice Nepal.

Hospice Nepal has now outgrown its current facilities and desperately needs a new building, it needs more beds, a small ward for the care of children, as none currently exist in Nepal and a facility to train more medical staff. The doctors, nursing staff and volunteers have achieved so much.

Just imagine what could be achieved, given better resources, access to modern training facilities and better equipment.

The future vision is to build a 25 bed hospice surrounded by a small garden where patients can take a walk and relax with nature. The ultimate goal is to make the patient and their relatives as comfortable as possible by medication for their physical comfort, and by providing for their spiritual and mental comfort in a peaceful, homelike atmosphere.

In the grounds of the hospice, we hope to build a small guesthouse for patients relatives, so they too can live comfortably whilst taking care of their loved ones.

To meet the patients and relatives spiritual needs, we would also like to provide a small meditation hall, temple and stupa.

CHILDRENS WARD

Currently there are no hospice services for children in Nepal. We aim to change that with the provision of a five bed children's unit with the appropriate facilities and play areas for the children at the new hospice.

NATIONAL TRAINING CENTRE

On the top floor of our new Hospice we will include a National Palliative Care Training Centre where Medical and Nursing staff from across Nepal can be given Palliative Care and End-of-Life training. To date we have trained 1,200 health workers in palliative care.

EDUCATION AND RESEARCH

There will be teaching areas for visiting doctors, nurses and health workers. Two rooms are planned; one being a large lecture style room and a seminar room. There will also be an associated library with facilities for tele-conferencing and tele-mentoring (through the Project Echo Programme)

OUR FUTURE VISION

Thanks to generous donations from within Nepal and from overseas we have now been able to purchase the land on which to build the new hospice. After nearly 20 years of hard work our staff are so excited to see their long held dream slowly becoming a reality.

As we move into Phase Two of the project we need to build the Hospice and then, using grants and foundation donations we will fit out the Hospice and Training Centre, which we hope, will become a "Centre of Excellence" and model for the improvement of Palliative Care services across Nepal, in collaboration with the Government supported Strategic Plan for Nepal, and the Government Health Care system.

RURAL COMMUNITY SERVICE

Nepal is a developing country which is beginning to provide palliative care services. However, most initiatives are limited to the capital city Kathmandu. There are many patients who live in the rural area who could benefit from the service but lack access.

Some 80% of the population live in the rural areas of Nepal and therefore 80% of palliative care need is in those rural areas. It is imperative then for us to develop palliative care in those areas of the country. To this end, we have been working in Makwanpur, a hilly district 5 hours drive from Kathmandu, since 2014.

We are working to develop a rural model of palliative care, based on the principle of 'For the locals, by the locals'. Two local health care workers have been trained and are now providing community-based palliative care services in Makwanpur. Patients are usually identified by Female Community Health Volunteers (FCHVs) and referred to our palliative care health professionals who visit patients at home and provide continuing care.

By incorporating a training centre within the new hospice we will be able to train many more health care workers and improve the service.
